Panian to Share Experience with Electronic Publishing

Hank Panian, published author and history professor emeritus at Orange Coast College, will open the Friends of the Library 2011-2012 season with a presentation, "The Rising Tide of New Publishing: Why?," at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, September 13th, at 215 Via San Remo, the Lido Isle home of Judith Longyear.

Panian will discuss his recent experiences with the electronic process of publishing for his new book, "The Cymerian Chapter," his first work of fiction. He will sign copies of his book following the presentation.

Panian retired in 1990 after teaching history at OCC for 34 years. With a Master's degree from UC Berkeley, he taught United States and California history. He received the first Salgo-Noren Foundation Award for outstanding teaching. As History Department chair for several years, Panian also helped fashion OCC's Professional Development Committee and was editor of several history books.

A member of the Mesa Consolidated Water District Board of Directors for 21 years, Panian became seriously involved with environmental issues. In 1981 the Costa Mesa Chamber of Commerce named him Man of the Year.

Panian and his wife, Barbara, have been married for 57 years and live in Costa Mesa. They have three children and five grandchildren.

Panian spent three years writing "The Cymerian Chapter," a young adult book that was inspired by his experience tutoring at-risk students in a local junior high school. The author observed too many youngsters almost mesmerized by computer games after completing homework. "The Cymerian Chapter" deals with that concern.

For more information about "The Cymerian Chapter," visit Panian's website at <http://hankpanian.com>. The book is also available on www.Amazon.com.

Donation: $5 at the door. Free admission for Friends of the Library and Lido Island Women's Club members, OCC students and anyone who donates a gently used book.

Lido Village Books will provide a selection of books for purchase at the program. Proceeds benefit the OCC Library.

Friends of the Library President's Message

I hope you are having an enjoyable summer. One of my visions of summer is of escaping to another world through reading. Whether you have traveled far afield on vacation, or taken a few days off from your routine for a staycation at home, I hope it has included some time set aside for reading. In our fast-paced world of staying connected, I fear that personal quiet time is being sacrificed. Reading affords us a chance to explore ourselves through contemplation and introspection – a chance to renew our spirit.

What I like about reading is that whatever your area of interest or reading level, there is a wide variety of books from which to choose. For me, browsing a bookstore or local library has always been a treat to while away an afternoon.

There are so many ways to read books these days that there is really no excuse for not indulging in this popular pastime. Personally I am still a big fan of the "printed word on paper" books, but while I was on vacation, I saw many people reading from the popular e-books. They are so easy to carry and they can hold so many volumes. And audio books are a popular, convenient and portable way to "read" when you can't stop to read.

So I encourage you to take advantage of these last few weeks of summer to lose yourself in a book. Hopefully, you will make it a habit to set aside time in your day to let yourself be transported to other worlds beyond your current reality.

And students, as you prepare to start this next semester, reading will become a big part of your life. Remember that reading is flexible and becomes what you make of it. If you see it as just a way to learn the material and get through a class, it will become a chore. If you view reading as a way to explore a subject, unlock ideas, question your world, you will reap its benefits by seeing your subject in a clearer light.

I would be remiss if I did not use this opportunity to encourage you to support our Friends of the Library organization. You can do so by either becoming a member or attending one of our upcoming events that are listed elsewhere in this newsletter. I look forward to seeing you in the coming months. Happy Reading!

Message from the Dean

The college library of the new millennium is rapidly evolving into far more than a collection of books in print and periodicals. Monikers such as "Learning Resource Center" and "Information Literacy" are rapidly becoming accepted into the standard lexicon of higher education.

Our new generation of students is often referred to as "digital natives;" the methods they use to acquire and process information is evolving as rapidly as the technology available to our students and faculty. Much of the communication between students is now through texting and social networking sites. Many students are more comfortable conducting research on a computer or tablet device than they are in seeking out that same information in print.

As the world of higher education and the learning community evolve, we must acknowledge the challenges and opportunities that new technology presents to our learning environment. We need to constantly evaluate the evolving needs of our OCC community, the students, faculty and staff, and at the same time ensure that our contemporary library is a welcome haven to our students. With this in mind we continue to seek out ways to make the library even more student friendly.
